WELCOME TO MÜNSTER

Just what is typical of this city? Is it the imposing cathedral, the venerable churches and the dignified patrician houses? Or the Gothic Town Hall with its historical legacy of the Peace of Westphalia? Or perhaps rather the exuberant atmosphere, the many young faces everywhere in the streets and cafés – and the multitude of bicycles?

Münster: An old city or a young one? Actually, it's the wrong question. Because it's precisely this contrast, this excitement, which gives the city its unmistakable flair. It's a Hanse city, and a cathedral city, with over 1200 years of rich tradition. At the same time it's an academic city with a large student population. All this makes Münster unique among Germany's large cities.

A rich history and today's vibrant culture, both interlinked in everyday life in the city, are what you can experience at first hand here. For example, a trendy pub located within medieval walls, Picasso's art in a Westphalian courtyard, or the gems of Baroque master-builders side by side with icons of contemporary architecture.

Münster's charm and beauty feed on this interplay. Welcome to your very own journey of discovery!

GUIDED TOURS “MUST-SEE SIGHTS”

01 – 05

Actually, to call this a tour is overdoing it a bit. Everything is very close at hand, and when you see it you're already getting a very concise picture of what's important in Münster and characteristic of the city. Off we go!

From the Historic Town Hall to St. Lamberti (church) about 1 hour

01

01

HISTORIC TOWN HALL AND STADTWEINHAUS

This 14th century Gothic building with its characteristic gable is Münster's landmark. It was almost completely destroyed in the war but was rebuilt in the 1950s as a near-replica through private initiative taken by the business community and with the help of donations made by the people of Münster. The Stadtweinhaus next door dates from 1615, and it was here that the city scales and wine stores were kept in earlier times. Decisions taken by the city council and the courts used to be announced from the balcony, under the city's coat of arms. The square behind the Town Hall is named after the Peace of Westphalia, the basic principle of which – “Tolerance through Dialogue” – is recalled by the bronze benches created by Eduardo Chillida.

FRIEDENSSAAL (HALL OF PEACE)

The most important room in the historic Town Hall: The Spanish-Dutch Peace Treaty was ratified here, in what was then the Council Chamber, on 15 May 1648, and this marked the birth of The Netherlands as a country. A few months later, on October 24, the Peace of Westphalia was signed here and in Osnabrück, bringing the Thirty Years' War to an end. The portraits of the sovereigns and of the most important emissaries are a reminder of this event of European significance. The Hall of Peace, preserved in its original state, can be viewed from Tues–Fri, 10 am–5 pm, and on Sat, Sun and public holidays from 10 am–4 pm (except when official events are taking place).

02

PRINZIPALMARKT

This is the heart of the historic Hanse city. From the 12th century onwards merchants and traders built their houses in this area, adjacent to the Cathedral, and sold their wares under the arcades. This collection of 48 arched houses with their Gothic or Renaissance gables was largely destroyed in the World War II, but they were rebuilt on the basis of their old forms – some as exact replicas, some in a simplified, modern style. This today is where a large part of the city's life takes place. This is not only where visiting heads of state are received and festivities are held, but also where people take a stroll, go shopping and enjoy life.

03

04

04

ST. PAULUS DOM (CATHEDRAL)

Over 1200 years ago Liudger, missionary to the Saxons, built a first monastery on the hill around which the city of Münster subsequently grew up. The Cathedral began to take on its present-day form from 1225 – late Romanesque architecture with Gothic additions, built mainly of Baumberg sandstone. One of the specialities inside the Cathedral is the Astronomical Clock dating from the 16th century with its daily chimes and the three revolving Magi (Mon to Sat, 12 noon, Sun and public holidays 12.30 pm). In front of the Cathedral is the traditional weekly market (Weds and Sat, 7 am to 2.30 pm), considered to be one of the finest in Germany.

ST. LAMBERTI (CHURCH)

This late Gothic hall church dating back to the 14th/15th centuries forms one end of Prinzipalmarkt. This is where Cardinal von Galen, the so-called “Lion of Münster”, preached his courageous sermons criticizing the Nazis. On the church tower three iron cages have been preserved in which the bodies of the Anabaptist leaders were displayed in the mid-16th century to act as a warning to the population. Above this is the room of the tower keeper. Every evening (except Tues) the tower keeper blows her horn every half-hour until midnight. First mentioned in documents in 1481, the tower keeper's job was originally to stand guard and watch out for fires.

GUIDED TOURS “MORE MÜNSTER”

06 – 24

If your first look around Münster whetted your appetite, why not try some more? The following pages suggest a route you can follow to take a closer look at Münster's characteristic lifestyle.

From the Krameramtshaus to the Apostelkirche (church)
about 2 hours

06 Krameramtshaus

Alter Steinweg 6–7

Originally the seat of the Merchants' Guild, this is one of the oldest guild houses (1589). The Dutch emissaries stayed here during the negotiations of the Peace of Westphalia. “Netherlands House” since 1995: an academic and cultural centre unique in Germany.

07 City Library

Alter Steinweg 11

This postmodern building dating from 1993 is considered to be an especially successful example of contemporary architecture (Bolles-Wilson/Wilson) in an historical environment. The narrow street between the two parts of the building extends the longitudinal axis of St. Lamberti (church).

08 Dominikanerkirche (church)

Salzstraße 10

This brick building (1705 – 1725, Lambert Friedrich von Corfey) with its Baroque sandstone façade and octagonal dome harks back to Roman basilicas. The building is a popular venue for concerts and is well-known for its especially fine acoustics.

Erbdrostenhof

Salzstraße 38

09

Together with Clemenskirche (church) and the Dominikanerkirche (church), the Erbdrostenhof – Architect Johann Conrad Schlaun's masterpiece, built between 1753 and 1757 – forms the so-called “Baroque island” in the middle of the city. Unusually, Münster's finest aristocratic residence stands diagonally on a rectangular site. Today it is the seat of the Landschaftsverband Westfalen-Lippe (LWL). Visits are only possible on official occasions.

Clemenskirche (church)

An der Clemenskirche

10

This round central building with its dome and lantern on top is another of Schlaun's main works. Built between 1745 and 1753, it was once part of the monastery and the hospital of the Brothers of Mercy. A popular church for weddings, also because of its magnificent interior equipped by south German artists in the Rococo style. The Baroque garden next to the church is an oasis of tranquillity in the hustle and bustle of city life.

St. Servatii (church)

Klosterstraße

11

Built around 1230 with late Romanesque and early Gothic elements. Highlights are the late Gothic choir and the winged altar dating back to around 1500. Of historical interest: it was here that the Anabaptist theologian Bernhard Rothmann first preached inside the city walls.

Synagogue

Klosterstraße 8 – 9

12

The history of Jewish life in Münster goes back to the 12th century. After the Jewish community was almost completely annihilated during the Nazi period, the new synagogue was inaugurated in 1961 on the site of the old one that had been destroyed.

Promenade

Today a traffic-free road round the Old Town and lined with linden trees, the Promenade was built on the site of the old city walls. It is both a 4½ km green belt for the city and also an important thoroughfare for anyone out and about on foot or by bicycle. Münster's largest flea market is held here five times a year, between Schlossplatz and Aasee (Lake Aa).

St. Ludgeri (church)

Marienplatz

14

Stepped hall church built around 1173, with late Romanesque tower, Gothic choir and west towers added in the 19th century. The Mariensäule (Column with the Virgin Mary), built in 1899 as a gift from a patron of the arts, is the "little sister" of the original to be found in Munich.

15 Picassoplatz (Picasso Square)

The pattern on the square opposite the Pablo Picasso Museum might strike pedestrians as being a bit odd, but a bird's eye view – even just from the museum's upper floor – provides the solution. Picasso's head (after a famous picture of him by the photographer Robert Capa) is reproduced in precise detail in the paving stones on the square.

16 Aa-side path

Follow Münster's river as it winds its idyllic way through an area full of history. At the foot of Cathedral Hill, between University institutes and past Petrikirche (church) to the old ford which marks the beginnings of Münster as a town. (Passage at Spiegelturm is closed in the evening)

17 Petrikirche (church)

Johannisstraße 5

Basilica with three naves dating back to the time between the Gothic and Early Renaissance periods. Richly decorated north portal. Originally a Jesuit Church, today the church school of the Paulinum grammar school. On one side of the path: Ulrich Rückriem's sculpture "Dolomit-zugeschnitten"

18 Überwasserkirche (church)

Überwasserkirchplatz

Hall church dating back to around 1340 with the largest Gothic church tower in Westphalia. The name ("Overwater Church") is derived from its location: on the other side of the River Aa ("over the water"), looking from the Cathedral, the church formed the kernel of a suburb with its own jurisdiction.

Diocesan Library

Überwasserkirchplatz 2 19

With 700,000 volumes, 680 magazines on permanent subscription and countless valuable old manuscripts, this is the largest theological library north of the Alps. The particularly successful contemporary architecture (2005, Max Dudler) provides an extension to, and a contrast with, the historic ensemble of Überwasserkirche and seminary.

Soldier's antiquarian bookshop

Frauenstraße 49 20

This is regularly transformed into the Wilsberg Bookshop for a popular German TV series involving Münster's most famous private detective and antiquarian bookseller, Georg Wilsberg, who sells his customers rarities and classics of world literature – when he's not pursuing criminals, that is ...

Schloss (Residence) and Botanischer Garten (Botanical Garden)

Schlossplatz 2 21

Built by J.C. Schlaun between 1767 and 1787 as a Baroque Residence for a Prince-Bishop, it is today the seat of the University's administration – and thus the centre of the academic city of Münster. The park behind it, with its splendid collection of old trees, contains the University Botanical Garden – over 200 years old and an ideal place for dreaming, discovering and relaxing (admission free).

22 Kuhviertel

Famous for its traditional student pubs and cosy restaurants – and for art. Whether it's Münster's first "Academic Beer Establishment", the Cavete, or the "Pinkus Müller" brewery with its dark beer – a lot of pubs here could tell a tale or two. Art galleries and original shops are as much a part of the quarter's flair as the street booksellers' market in the summer.

23 Kiepenkerl memorial

Spiekerhof 45

One of the Münsterland's landmarks. The Kiepenkerl was an itinerant trader with a traditional basket on his back. With a short linen smock and a red neckscarf, cap, pipe and gnarled walking stick he was responsible for both goods and news being exchanged between town and country. The memorial has stood here since 1896. After being destroyed in the war it was rebuilt as an exact replica of the original in 1953.

24 Apostelkirche (church)

Neubrückenstraße 1

First purely Gothic church in Münster (around 1270). Franciscan church for more than 500 years, important vault paintings (15th to 17th centuries) and three fully preserved bells from Amsterdam dating back to 1675. In 1840 it was transferred to the Protestant congregation as a garrison church, making it the oldest Protestant church in Münster.

Cherry Column
(Thomas Schütte)

Every ten years all eyes in the international art scene are on the skulptur projekte münster. Since 1977, “Art in Public Places” has been the motto for artists to deal with the issues of public spaces in the city and Münster’s history. Important works have been created in this process – and many of them have left their mark on the cityscape. The fifth edition of the skulptur projekte münster will take place in 2017.

14 Tolerance through dialogue

Eduardo Chillida

The bronze benches created by the famous Basque sculptor (1924 – 2002) reflect the guiding principle of the Peace of Westphalia: a negotiated peace through the patient search for compromise – but not always easy and not always unbroken.

15 Concert in reverse

Rebecca Horn

The bailey of this castle, in which the Gestapo executed prisoners in 1944, is transformed into a gripping memorial: 42 metallic hammers beat against the walls, red lamps cast flickering patches of light, water drips into a cistern – a haunting experience.

The Moon in Alabama

Tobias Rehberger

16

The internationally renowned artist Tobias Rehberger has re-designed some switchboxes round the railway station, transforming grey cubes into imaginative seating objects and giving the cityscape a distinctive new look. These new locations offer opportunities for a romantic Tête-à-Tête, a chat together or just for looking at them.

Large Vertebrae

Henry Moore

17

The three parts of this bronze sculpture stand close to each other – but not connected. In their harmonious smoothness, and embedded in green parkland, they combine the experience of modern art with that of nature.

Giant Pool Balls

Claes Oldenburg

18

These have become one of the city’s landmarks. A giant once played billiards here and left behind three balls. Oldenburg achieved worldwide fame through enlarging – and thus defamiliarizing – everyday objects.

SHOPPING & GOING OUT SHOPPING PLEASURE MEETS SAVOIR-VIVRE

Had enough culture for a little while? Then how about a relaxed shopping tour? Whether your budget is big or small, whether it's classic fashion you're looking for or the latest trends, or rare antiques or culinary specialities – in Münster you'll find things you won't find elsewhere. And all that in charming surroundings where you can enjoy all the breaks in-between. More details can be found in the "Münster geht aus" ("Going out in Münster") guide, available at a price of €2,50 at Münster Tourist Information, or at >> www.muenster-geht-aus.com (in German only)

01 Prinzipalmarkt

A stroll under the colonnades of the venerable old patrician houses is a must. Elegant fashion, exclusive jewellery, watches and antiques in specialist shops that in many cases have been here for a very long time. Stop for a coffee in the shade of the historic Town Hall and Lambertikirche (church) and let your gaze wander over a unique city panorama.

02 Alter Fischmarkt

A new gateway to the city centre, displaying elegant gabled-house architecture, and characterized by attractive courtyard restaurants, an exciting department store for children and exclusive fashion shops.

03 Salzstraße

Münster's oldest commercial street is a lively mixture of fashion and shoe shops, jewellers, home décor stores and small cafés – all flanked by cultural highlights, especially the so-called Baroque island: the Erbdrostenhof, the Dominikanerkirche (church) and Clemenskirche (church).

04 Stubengasse and Hansecarré

The outstanding modern architecture here (Urban Design Prize 2010) presents an attractive contrast to the historical Prinzipalmarkt. Trendy chain stores for young fashion, as well as bars and cafés in plenty of space that opens up new opportunities to stroll around the centre of Münster.

05 Ludgeriviertel

Located between Ludgeristraße and Königsstraße, this quarter is an attractive mixture of large fashion stores and department stores, smaller shops typical of Münster and many restaurants and cafés. Ludgeristraße is one of Germany's Top 10 shopping streets. A special attraction is the modern Münster Arcades, a shopping mall on three levels.

Rothenburg

06

A lively street linking Prinzipalmarkt, the Münster Arcades and the Aegidiimarkt. Take a stroll and enjoy the combination of high-class chain stores, local individualists and traditional hospitality.

Kiepenkerlviertel

07

Here is where Münster's history and individual lifestyle come together to provide a special kind of shopping experience. Many of the shops here are run by the owners themselves, and there are also popular shops for younger people as well as galleries. The culinary delights on offer run the gamut from traditional Westphalian to international.

08

With its narrow winding streets this quarter has one of the oldest in the city centre. Although known especially as a traditional pub quarter, with its galleries and antique shops it also has a lot to offer art and antique lovers.

Hörsterstraße

09

Many small, exclusive shops specializing in fashion, furniture, antiques and art provide the setting for a relaxed shopping tour. Cafés and restaurants provide opportunities for visitors to relax and enjoy themselves during a shopping break or in the evening.

Bahnhofsviertel (Station Quarter)

10

A wide range of shops, restaurants and things to see and do have made this quarter a popular destination for locals and guests alike, with its renowned hotels, numerous cafés and clubs and the GOP Variety Theatre.

Hafenviertel (Harbour Quarter) | Kreativkai

11

The place to go out in the city's harbour area. Here is where visitors come across an exciting mixture of art and culture, gastronomy and hip clubs, in old harbour buildings and out-of-the-ordinary modern ones – right at the water's edge.

FUN THINGS FOR CHILDREN KIDS & CO.

Tourist sights, churches – and all those streets. Really hard for small legs. City breaks with children? As parents you need to have some good ideas – but don't worry, because Münster is a young, family-friendly city. You can tell that when you see all the things on offer to keep the little ones entertained.

Playtime in Münster

Maxi-hits in the city centre

MaxiTurM

The next time you come to Münster, why not give yourself some free time – and let your kids enjoy themselves? There's variety and fun and games waiting for boys and girls from the ages of 4 to 10. Qualified staff will look after your children in the Maxi-Turm (Maxi-Tower) for up to 3 hours. (3 euros per child, no booking necessary.)

Prinzipalmarkt 15, Mon to Fri, 2 – 6 pm;

Sat 10 am to 6 pm (but not in the 2nd to the 5th weeks of the school summer holidays)

Maxi SAND

Does the family need a break from the hustle and bustle of the city? Then come along to Maxi-Sand. The sandpit here is like a little oasis which gives especially the youngest visitors space to relax. You as parents are responsible for looking after your children. After 6 pm the buckets and spades are exchanged for a volleyball net and older sand-lovers can also have their fun.

Syndikatplatz, May to Sept, Mon to Sat, 11 am to 6 pm

Further details in the Kids Office (Kinderbüro):

All the greenery in Münster offers a welcome change especially for parents with children – space to play, run around and relax. But there's more besides on offer for kids.

Allwetterzoo Münster (Münster all-weather zoo)

Sentruper Str. 315

01

The all-weather zoo is a highlight for the whole family. And it deserves its name – many of the paths are roofed or canopied. The Westphalian Horse Museum is also located here. Very close to the zoo – and also well worth a visit – are the Planetarium and the Natural History Museum. >> www.allwetterzoo.de/englisch/index.php

Aasee (Lake Aa)

02

Something that's really nice is a trip on Lake Aa on the solar-driven ship "Solaaris" that runs regularly between the lakeside terraces and the zoo. And while we're at it, what about a nice little tour of the lake in a paddleboat or a pedalo?

Other things to do and see

Rainy days are always a problem for parents of course. But Münster has enough on offer for you to survive these as well. Try for example the Charivari marionette theatre (www.charivari-theater.de, in German only), or the wide range of indoor playgrounds, the Rummenigge indoor soccer hall (www.soccerhalle.de, in German only), the things that many museums have on offer for children, or the Skaters Palace (www.skaters-palace.de, in German only) for young skateboarders.

Up-to-date information for families with children is available at Münster Tourist Information, including for example children's activities in Münster zoo, the Horse Museum and the Mühlenhof open-air museum; readings under a starry sky in the Planetarium; children's activities in the Pablo Picasso Museum and Fidinolo concerts for children in the Friedenskapelle (Chapel of Peace); guided walks around the city, or canoeing or crazy golf at Pleistermühle, as well as programmes of activities for the Easter and summer holidays. >> www.tourism.muenster.de – Link: Services – Münster for families and children

MÜNSTER: A GREEN CITY TAKE A DEEP BREATH!

After all the hustle and bustle of city life, how about taking a break in lush green surroundings? Or maybe even an excursion into the countryside? The good thing is that you don't even have to leave Münster to do so. Whether it's the green belt of the Promenade, in the Schlosspark at the Residence or by Aasee (Lake Aa) – leading directly into the surrounding open countryside – or the few minutes it takes to cycle to the Gasselstiege cycle path, to the River Werse or to the Rieselfelder nature reserve: what would Münster be without its lush greenery?

01 Aasee (Lake Aa)

The people of Münster love their Lake Aa. Located very close to the Old Town, it is a constant invitation to cycle or walk into the green surroundings. In 2009 the lake was awarded the title of Europe's Most Beautiful Park. The best views of the lake can be had from the new lakeside terraces – or from Jorge Pardo's "Pier", just one of the many sculptures around the lake.

02 Botanischer Garten (Botanical Garden)

Established in 1803 as part of the University's scientific work, the garden is also open to the public. It has an incomparable range of plants and is an oasis of relaxation in the middle of Münster.

03 Promenade

In the 18th century the city fathers of Münster decided to demolish the city walls. Residents and visitors alike are today grateful to them that planted a double row of linden trees in place of the walls. So much green – and so close to the city centre!

Rieselfelder European nature reserve

04

A wildlife habitat for many rare species of animals and plants, the reserve is one of the most important bird sanctuaries in the EU, offering an exceptional experience of nature. Endangered species of waterfowl and wading birds have found an ideal sanctuary here.

River Werse

05

Historically not as significant as the River Aa, but all the more important for leisure activities. Paddling on the river or cycling along its banks gets you out into the lush greenery. Take a couple of deep breaths and you'll discover the Münster way to relax.

Cycling

If you really want to give yourself a treat, just get on a bike! Münster is the cycling capital of Germany, with an outstanding network of cycle paths. The first bicycle car park in Germany was built here in 1999, at the station, and more followed later. Nor are current trends ignored: at many places in Münster e-bikes can be recharged for free. >> www.tourism.muenster.de – Link: Bicycle capital

TYPICAL MÜNSTER NOT MANY PEOPLE KNOW THAT ...

And apart from the classic sights? There are some other interesting facets that Münster is famous for in the wider world. Here's a small selection of things typical of Münster. You might even recognize one or the other ...

CSI Münster

How could it come to this? Münster of all places as a hotbed of crime! But the viewing figures don't lie: TV detectives Börne, Thiel, Wilsberg & Co. are among the most popular investigators on the small screen in Germany.

Tower keeper

Martje Saljé, one of the few tower keepers in Europe, blows the horn high up in the tower of St. Lamberti (church). Every day, except Tuesdays, she can be heard every half an hour between 9 pm and midnight.

Anabaptists

In the 1530s the eyes of all Christendom were on Münster, where unheard-of things were happening. The citizens defied their overlords, the bishops, and rejected the old faith. The Anabaptists proclaimed the city as the New Jerusalem and made their leader, Jan van Leiden, king. The end, when it came, was bloody. The bishop recaptured the city through a betrayal and staged a massacre. Still today the cages on St. Lamberti (church) recall the fate of the executed Anabaptists.

Felix the Bunny

Children (and parents too) love the widely-travelled bunny and the letters he writes. But did you know that Münster is actually his home? Just like Princess Lillifee he is the product of an old family firm of publishers in Münster.

Students

They make for a young, multicultural city and leave an unmistakable mark on Münster life. There are over 200 students per 1.000 inhabitants – a ratio unparalleled in Germany's major cities. Every year the universities attract a new influx of young faces and talents (approx. 60.000 students) – which is infectious and keeps the venerable old city young and lively. An elixir for the whole population here.

Bicycles (aka "Leeze")

Münster's No. 1 mode of everyday transport also provides sporting highlights: during the Münsterland Giro the venerable old Prinzipalmarkt is turned into a section of the third-largest cycle race in Germany.

Westphalian cooking

Ham, pumpernickel, pig's trotters, peppered beef stew – come and discover the traditional down-to-earth cooking that the region has to offer! Whether it's hearty rustic fare or a sophisticated modern dish – prepared by the professionals it's always delicious.

Pinkus beer

This Westphalian dark beer brewery and restaurant is full of tradition: the Müller family is now brewing its famous Pinkus beers in the sixth generation – incl. the world's first bio-beer. Pinkus beer is exported to a community of fans all over the world.
